Case Farms Receives Five Workplace Safety Awards from Joint Industry Safety and Health Council

TROUTMAN, N.C. – August 16, 2018 – Five Case Farms’ facilities, three processing plants and two feed mills, were recognized by the Joint Industry Safety and Health Council for their outstanding performance of implementing innovative and effective employee safety and health programs. Case Farms was honored at the 2018 National Safety Conference for the Poultry Industry in Destin, Florida.

“At Case Farms, our safety processes and systems are at the core of who we are,” said Rick Barton, Director of Safety for Case Farms. “These awards recognize company goals that put people first and showcase our company’s dedication to our employees and workplace safety. We’re proud of our teams’ accomplishments and focus on continuous improvement.”

Facilities that were recognized with the Award of Honor, the Council’s second highest honor, include Case Farms’ processing plant in Goldsboro, N.C. and feed mill in Shelby, N.C.

The Council also presented its Award of Merit to three Case Farms facilities, including processing plants in Morganton, N.C. and Winesburg, Ohio and a feed mill in Massillon, Ohio.

Award consideration was based on injury statistics over three years that are equal to or less than the industry average as reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and an evaluation of written applications by academia and other safety experts.

The Joint Industry Safety and Health Council consist of members from the U.S. Poultry & Egg Association, National Chicken Council and National Turkey Federation. Collectively, the three organizations represent companies that produce 95 percent of the nation’s poultry products and directly employ more than 350,000 workers.
