FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Case Farms Donates to North Carolina School for the Deaf
Donation helps students reach their unlimited potential

Morganton, N.C. – December 10, 2014 – Leading poultry producer Case Farms recently made a significant donation to the North Carolina School for the Deaf Foundation (NCSD). This year, the annual donation will contribute to the foundation’s mission of closing the gap between the shrinking availability of public dollars and the increasing need for more effective ways to enrich education for the deaf community. The foundation, located in Morganton, is a nonprofit organization that works closely with the area schools to create a world where there are no limits to what deaf and hard-of-hearing students can achieve.

“The generous donation made by our neighbors at Case Farms will help our students achieve success within and apart from the school,” said Tom Maye, North Carolina School for the Deaf Foundation director. “With donors like Case Farms, we are able to enhance the educational experience of our students beyond the state and federally funded program. We wouldn’t be able to provide these enhancements without the support from our community.”

The NCSD has served the state’s hearing-impaired community since 1895. It is one of two primary public schools for hearing-impaired students in first through 12th grade in North Carolina. With assistance from the foundation, the NCSD offers education programs as well as vocational rehabilitation services on campus for students after graduation. Additionally, the foundation provides scholarships, financial aid, classroom supplies, educational field trips and training needed for work placement after graduation.

“The North Carolina School for the Deaf helps impacts our community in many ways and we are privileged to help them achieve their mission,” said Charles Rigdon, GM/VP of Case Farms’ Morganton Division. “We know the importance and value of education and training and are proud to support such a great organization. If we can make a difference in just one student’s life, then we have made a lasting impression that will resonate throughout our community.”
